Lynching in Alabama. The lynching of John H. Bailes at Athens, Ala., (as heretofore mentioned in the Gazette) took place Saturday evening. Beiles had been confined in the county jail since the Middle of May, 1879, under an indictment for the murder of his wite. The mob, members of which did the hanging, comprised about one hundred mounted men cone of whom were known to the citizens of Athens, and are supposed to be men from Tennessee. They halted in the northern sabarbs of the town and about thirty men were sent in to do the work which they olaimed the law ought to have performed a year ago. The detail took one of their number, bound him and proceeded to the jail, roused the jailer. JAMES F. CARLIN & SONS, James D. Minges, and cold him they used a prisoner which they wished to lodge in jail. Upon this the jailer opened the gate and lour men with their pretended prisoner entered and mounted the stairway to the upper story where the cells are situated. Mr. Minges opened the cage and one of the men entered with the bound prisoner. At this moment two of the others seiz d Mr. Mingea and told him that in exchange for the prisoner they had brought they wanted Bailes. At this Bailes began to plead and pray, but soon resiizing his desperate situation he made fight and knocked down two of his assailants when they opposed him. However he was soon overpowered and the rope, a cotton plough line, which had bound the pretended prisoner, was fastened to Bailes' neck and he was dragged to the Court House yard, about two hundred and fitty yards distant. During the transit he made all the resistance in his power, struggling violently three or tour times to effect an Reaching the Court House yard and the fatal tree Bailes made no further resistance, but asked his captors to allow him to send a message to his mother. One of the men replied: "Not a d-d word; talking saved his d-d neak last Immediatey the rope was passed over a limb of the locast tree under which they were then standing, and three of the men pulled the wretched Bailes from the ground. The limb ore than ten feet from the ground the feet of the culprit were not more than 18 inches from it. His neck was not proken nor scarcely bruised. For about six minutes he struggled terribly and then died from strangulation. After the mob were satisfied that Builes was dead they rode quietly away, and, joining the maio party, which did not enter the town, all of them went their way.

John H. Balies was about twenty-four years of age, a white man and a native of Alabama, where his parents still reside. In March, 1878 he was married to Mary A. Loveless, a young lady of respectable family. In February 1879, she returned to her mother broads her husband beat and otherwise abused her He made several attempts to induce her to return to his house, but failed On the 14th day of May, 1879, he want to her, while she was with her mother planting water melons, in the garden and shot her in open day ight, and attempted to shoot her mother, Mrs Loveless. For soout ten days he eluded arrest by skulking, but was finally arristed and brought to Athens Three days afterward a large mob came to town for the avowed purpose of hanging him, but the citizens interfered and tae law was permitted to take its course. At a special term of the Circuit Court in January following he was tried, found guilty and condemned to be hanged. On the twelfth day a second mob appeared in Athens. Meantime an appeal was taken and the Supreme Court re-manded the case for a second trial. This was had at the regular term of the Circuit Court, on the 12th day of May, 1880, he was sentenced to be hanged on the 2d day of July. Another appeal was taken, and the Supreme Court Sus-pended the sentence On last Thursday intel-ligence was received that the case had been again remanded, and this produced the tragedy of Saturday night. There is a general feeling which disapproves of mob rule, yet all agree that no injustice has be perpetrated.—New York

Beautiful eyes are blue as often as brown. The delicate veil which hangs over the mountains is blue. There is blue in the rainbow and in the sunbeams, and some of the stars shine with a blue light, show. ing that whole constellations of worlds are draped in blue. It is not a bad color when one gets used to it. We did not confess to moonlight walks for ourselves. Alas, they are gone the decades back. But to this we can testify, that for making the most of a moonlight walk, in which the longest way round is the shortest way home, we pur a bevy of young Presbyteriane against an other species of animate life in existence. Even a single pair of them do not coosider such a walk as any great hardship."
